

Abstract

The present invention provides a method for increasing glutamate content of plants and/or seeds by deleting or reducing GGT activity, and also plants and/or seeds having deleted or reduced GGT activity, particularly having a glutamate content higher 5 than that of corresponding wild type plants cultivated under the same conditions.